San Jose & Silicon Valley Trivia - Question 1

- This early settler was a noted bear hunter in the Santa Cruz Mountains
- In May, 1854 in an epic struggle, he lost an eye, had one side of his disfigured and had to have a silver plate installed to cover the exposed part of his brain.
- He was later engaged in the lumber business in San Jose and passed away some 48 years later in 1902.
- Some of you may have been to a bar in Los Gatos that is his namesake.

San Jose & Silicon Valley Trivia - Question 2

- Some might say this development in the early 20th century was the start of what became the Internet of its day.
- There is a linkage between the developments of the circuits used in this invention and the role of Silicon Valley in the semiconductor revolution.
- The inventor opened a college of engineering in 1909 and later that year literally announced his invention.
- A plaque to this accomplishment can be found at the Capital Club Building on San Fernando and 1st Street.
